Bad Website:

1. Design Style

- The website uses a modern travel landing page design with a large hero image to attract users.

- Bold typography and soft color tones give the page a clean and visually appealing look suitable for a travel website.

---

2. Content

- The content provides informative details about France, highlighting its culture, landmarks, and history.
- Call-to-action buttons like “Book Now” and “More Info” support the promotional nature of the content.

3. Navigation

- A top navigation bar is used to help users move easily between sections like Packages, Flights, and Explore.
- The navigation layout is simple and uncluttered, making it user-friendly.

---

4. Purpose

- The main purpose of the website is to promote France as a travel destination.
- It aims to encourage users to book trips or explore travel packages through clear call-to-action buttons.

Good Website:

1. Design Style

- The website follows a modern and visually engaging travel website design with strong use of colors, gradients, and rounded elements.
- The improved layout, rating badges, and trip duration cards give the design a professional and premium look.

2. Content

- The content clearly describes France while highlighting key travel information such as rating and trip duration.
- Text is well-placed inside a highlighted container, making it easy to read and visually separated from the background.

3. Navigation

- The top navigation bar is clear and well-organized, with important options like Packages, Flights, and Explore.
- The highlighted “Explore” button helps guide users toward the main action.

4. Purpose

- The main purpose of the website is to promote France as a travel destination and encourage bookings.
- Clear call-to-action buttons like “Book Now” and “More Info” effectively support user decision-making.

Key Differences:

Visual Appeal: Bad design looks plain and unorganized, while good design looks attractive and professional.

Content Presentation: Bad design shows long text blocks, whereas good design presents content clearly with visual elements.

User Guidance: Bad design does not guide users clearly, while good design highlights actions like Explore and Book Now.

Overall Experience: Bad design feels confusing and incomplete, while good design feels smooth, engaging, and user-friendly.
